Touching Eden

1,789 sqm, Singapore, 2023

Role: Project Lead (Interior)
Studio: Edmund Ng Architects

Situated adjacent to the Singapore Botanic Gardens, this residence offers breathtaking views of the lush and historic gardens. The architecture, conceived with the principle of “borrowed scenery,” creates a seamless transition between the rainforest canopy and the home, featuring abundant tropical planting and inviting gentle breezes.

On the inside, the interior design prioritizes unobstructed views through meticulous layout planning and the selection of elegant, low-profile furniture. A refined palette of muted neutrals, complemented by rich materials, establishes an atmosphere of quiet, sophisticated luxury, allowing the vibrant greens of the surrounding landscape to become the focal point. Sunlight dappling across surfaces of natural stone, fine veneer, and Italian leather creates a sense of true luxury. The interiors, featuring exquisite designer pieces from Giorgetti and Minotti, embody a bespoke luxury experience.

This project, a boutique luxury home, represents a complete, turn-key offering, from architectural design to fully customized interiors. As the lead interior designer, I collaborated closely with the architects, landscape architects, and various consultants and the builder, ensuring a cohesive and exceptional outcome. Our comprehensive services extended to the procurement and styling of all decorative elements, including flatware, enabling the future owner to simply arrive and immediately enjoy their new home.
